Synopsis: When, in 1942, japanese troops besiege Singapur, a group of women from different countries, together with their children, are evacuated by boat to a safe location. During the voyage, the ship is attacked by the Japanese Air Force and is wrecked off the coast of Sumatra. Women and children are caught and sent to a concentration camp in the middle of the jungle. The living conditions there are extremely hard, and the treatment received, inhumane. The establishment of a vocal orchestra helps them to bear that situation. Based on a real story (modified from FilmAffinity).
